Classic Car Club of America Selects RumbleSeat as Its New Club Website and Management Platform

One of the nation's oldest car clubs moves its forums, marketplace, events, directory, library and gallery onto a single platform built specifically for car clubs

SCOTTSDALE, AZ — September 25, 2026 — RumbleSeat, the automotive platform built for car clubs and the enthusiasts who drive them, today announced that the Classic Car Club of America (CCCA) has selected RumbleSeat as its new website and club management platform for its membership. The CCCA's site is moving from classiccarclub.org's previous infrastructure to RumbleSeat, which allows for joining and renewing memberships, and gives members access to a single login for forums, the club marketplace, event registration, the member directory, the library, and the gallery.

Founded in 1952, CCCA is one of the country's longest-running car clubs, publishing The Classic Car magazine, hosting the Annual Membership Meeting and Grand Classic® show, and running CARavan tours as well as Grand Classic® car show judging events nationwide for owners of pre- and postwar Full Classics®. The selection follows a review process in which the club evaluated platforms against a detailed set of requirements for member experience, feature depth, and long-term cost.

"We had a lot of requirements and criteria when selecting a new platform," said Thomas Lee, who chairs the CCCA's Digital & National Website Committee and also serves on its Classification and Publications & Handbook committees. "RumbleSeat has been an excellent partner and made certain to support all of our needs. We're excited about offering a better online experience for our members."

"RumbleSeat offers an incredibly feature-rich car club platform," said Paul Tupis, who serves on the CCCA's Digital & National Website Committee, CARavans, and Publications & Handbook committees. "As a club, we have all the tools we could ever want to manage our members and our site. RumbleSeat is purpose-built to serve car clubs, so the features and tools are already there to let us run a better club experience."

"The CCCA has been doing this since 1952 — their members know exactly what a club site should do, and what it shouldn't get in the way of," said JP Hunt, Co-founder of RumbleSeat. "That's the kind of partner that makes us better. We're proud to be the platform they picked to run their site."

As part of the move, every CCCA member also receives a free RumbleSeat account at no additional cost and no new dues. That account includes a digital garage for documenting each car's service history and records, access to RumbleSeat's national marketplace with RumblePay buyer protection, and RumbleFeed, RumbleSeat's community feed for enthusiasts. All existing CCCA membership information, profiles and club records transfer directly to the new platform.

The new CCCA site is part of RumbleSeat's broader platform, which also includes tools for club membership and event management, digital garages, an automotive marketplace, and a community feed — used by car clubs across the country to bring their members online in one place instead of stitching together separate forum, classifieds and event-registration tools.

More information on the CCCA's new site is available at rumbleseat.com/ccca; however, CCCA's current URL continues to be (unchanged) at classiccarchub.org.
